Not illustrated. 1884 edition. Excerpt: .of the artery is very short, and it terminates about at the level of the junction of the second rib with its cartilage. For this reason the murmur of stenosis of the pulmonary artery is scarcely audible in the first intercostal space. The artery increases in size with age; as a rule, it is much larger than the aorta until old age supervenes. Narrowing Of The Orifice Of The Pulmonary Artery. Lesions of the right heart, particularly sclerotic endocarditis of the pulmonary orifice, had not been observed except upon the cadaver, so that its description was entirely wanting. One reason which prevented its ready recognition was the fact that it was supposed that cyanosis would occur in such cases; so that in 1869, when I had occasion to diagnose a remarkable case of this affection, I could find scarcely anything on the subject in medical...
